“ We are all one of a kind , but from my first memories of Chuck when he was in sixth grade and became good friends with my son Scotty and later my daughter Ann, he was always his own person. He had an infectious grin and could charm the birds out of the trees. After he grew up and went out into the world he would send me a Christmas card from “your velvety voiced son” which always made me smile. He was a part of my family and life that has left another hole in it by his passing.
