“ My grandfather had been battling cancer for 3 months now. He had made multiple visits to the hospital, was a fighter through radiation and chemo, and today was released on hospice. All he wanted was to be home with his family. I left work to greet him, and as I traveled that old country road I noticed the most peaceful day. The cows lined the fences as if they knew he'd be passing by soon. Tiny leaves swished around as they fell from towering limbs above. I felt the urge to record all I was seeing so I could show Tata the beauty that was welcoming him home. (He was transported by ambulance and wouldn't be able to see what I saw) Once home, a gust of wind filled the air and he took a deep breath as they transferred him to his room. He was now home, settled in his bed, on the land he has worked so selflessly to keep for his family. As we watched the video it was as if it was in his perspective floating home. Within 20 minutes of being home with us my Tata was called to his eternal HOME! I have never experienced such peace in losing someone. He has been in every moment of not only my life but my children's, also. I was blessed to be there in his final moments. He was the best grandfather I could ever wish for. My heart is terribly sad but I am grateful that he is whole again and pain free. I'll love you forever, Tata!
