“ Paul was a true friend to my father and that friendship extended to me and my whole family. Paul was patient with me as a young ticket writer, teaching me how to pay attention, listen, and record sales accurately. He was one of the hardest working men I know. He will truly be missed and thought of often.

“ When we think about Paul, you can't help but smile... wondering how many thousands of blankets he provided to keep all our horses warm and where would we have gone to get the things we all needed without Paul? How lucky we were to have this man as part of our community. He was the last of the "traders" and a good friend to my father Bill Stallings. He will be missed.
